

Jason and Max picked next Friday to carry out their special mission.	12
Friday was a week away. They had so many things to accomplish. In order to reach their final goal, the boys made a plan for each day of the week. They had to work hard every day to finish each task. Could they do it all?	25 41 55 58
On Monday, they agreed to meet and put plan A into action.	70
Plan A was to gather as many fallen branches as they could carry. They hauled the wood from the edge of the cornfield and stacked it in a big pile at the edge of the forest.	84 99 106
On Tuesday, the boys met near the lazy creek and put plan B into motion. They dug up rocks the size of footballs from the creek's bottom. By dusk, they had arranged the rocks in a neat circle next to the pile of branches they had hauled the night before.	120 133 149 156
On Wednesday, plan C was to climb into the attic above Jason's garage. They searched around with flashlights and both found backpacks. They wore their packs as they rode their bikes to the edge of the forest to complete the day's work.	168 177 190 198
On Thursday it rained. They had to drop the plan for the day. Still, Jason and Max met at the end of their driveways under umbrellas. They quietly spoke. They decided their mission would work without plan D.	212 225 236
When the sun went down on Friday, they met at the edge of the forest. There sat their tent. They'd set it up on Wednesday evening. The wood was ready to go into their campfire ring. Their next step was to build a warm fire.	250 262 276 281
The mission to camp out was complete. The only tasks now were to sit back and enjoy the fruits of their labor.	293 303

Jason and Max picked next Friday to carry out their special mission. Friday was a week away. They had so many things to accomplish. In order to reach their final goal, the boys made a plan for each day of the week. They had to work hard every day to finish each task. Could they do it all?

On Monday, they agreed to meet and put plan A into action. Plan A was to gather as many fallen branches as they could carry. They hauled the wood from the edge of the cornfield and stacked it in a big pile at the edge of the forest.

On Tuesday, the boys met near the lazy creek and put plan B into motion. They dug up rocks the size of footballs from the creek's bottom. By dusk, they had arranged the rocks in a neat circle next to the pile of branches they had hauled the night before.

On Wednesday, plan C was to climb into the attic above Jason's garage. They searched around with flashlights and both found backpacks. They wore their packs as they rode their bikes to the edge of the forest to complete the day's work.

On Thursday it rained. They had to drop the plan for the day. Still, Jason and Max met at the end of their driveways under umbrellas. They quietly spoke. They decided their mission would work without plan D.

When the sun went down on Friday, they met at the edge of the forest. There sat their tent. They'd set it up on Wednesday evening. The wood was ready to go into their campfire ring. Their next step was to build a warm fire.

The mission to camp out was complete. The only tasks now were to sit back and enjoy the fruits of their labor.